THE PMI MISSION

The PMI College of Scheduling will provide a forum for Professionals to promote excellence in scheduling through networking, sharing project experiences, providing and receiving training, providing support and encouragement for the ongoing development of the PMI Body of Knowledge in the areas of scheduling and time management, and supporting project managers in their PMP certification efforts.

NOTE FROM THE PRESIDENT

The College of Scheduling will be holding our first Spring Conference together with the College of Performance Management from May 7-9 in New Orleans. Gwen Barger, our Director of Programs and Fred Plotnick, our Technical Track Director have worked hard to put together a terrific program, and I encourage all of you to join us next week in Louisiana. See you there!

PMI-CPM SPRING CONFERENCE

PMI College of Performance Management and the PMI College of Scheduling invite you to the 19th annual Spring Conference, being held this year in New Orleans, Louisiana.

This year's three-day program will prove out to be one of the most diverse and value packed programs in many years. The program will not only review Critical Path Method Scheduling including its history and development, but will provide new insights on how CPM is used today and what new challenges schedulers, programmers and managers who use CPM are faced with on today's projects. Topics will include such subjects as:

Scope management, EVM principles, interpretations and lessons for the further integrated baselines, WBS development, quality management, CPM analyses, control system design, the use of IPTs, establishing surveillance programs, independent program assessments, risk assessments, and proactive claims practice. Some of the nation's most acclaimed experts in the
